

ABSTRACT

A body frame for a motorcycle includes a main frame having a reinforcing member, which is a forged product, and a portion that requires a high strength against a shock load transmitted from a road surface. A pair of sidewalls and a connecting wall for connecting the sidewalls are also provided. The sidewalls create spaces opened outward in cross-section such that the connecting wall has an external face positioned in the portion that requires high strength.